DEFICIT

IN UNITED STATES TREASURY

Makes Currency Legislation Necessary

Uncle Sam in no Condition to Lend Assistance in Case of Financial Distress This Fall.

Washington, May 25.—While the fear is general that the house and senate may be unable to agree on an emergency currency law, earnest efforts are being made by the leaders to bring about a general agreement to accept either the Vreeland bill or the Aldrich bill. It is declared that there is no possibility of any compromise. The differences that developed in conference over the two measures are believed to be irreconcilable. One house or the other must yield, or there will be no legislation.

In the last two days of the week just closed a lot of missionary work has been done in the interest of currency legislation. Those engaged in it kept their own counsel, and it did not become known until yesterday that while the conferees had formally discontinued holding the sessions, the leaders acting with the conferees were bending every effort to bring about an agreement. A number of conferences on emergency currency were held tonight, but the results will not develop until tomorrow.

Great disappointment is expressed by members of the house and the senate over what now appears to be a fiasco on the currency question. Congress met last December right on the heels of a panic that was serious in its influences upon commerce and trade throughout the United States. The senate committee on finance, of which Mr. Aldrich is chairman, went to work at once in an effort to draft a measure that would provide an abundance of currency for emergencies. The measure was confessedly a makeshift. It was intended only to serve until opportunity was given to devise a scientific system of banking and currency for the United States.

The Aldrich bill was passed in the senate after considerable debate. It was amended in several particulars, in every case with the consent of Mr. Aldrich.

With the railroad bond feature of the bill stricken out, the measure became more popular in the house, where formerly it had been condemned, and the hope was then expressed that the Aldrich bill, or something approximating it, would be enacted into law.

Trouble started when the house committee on banking and currency tabled the senate measure. An agitation against it was begun with the result that it was only necessary to mention "Aldrich bill" in the house to start an oral debate. The Vreeland bill was then evolved. Before it could be passed the house Republicans had party conferences.

Complaint has been made by house conferees that in their dealings with the senate they have been acting in a purely ministerial capacity. Their hands have been tied by an evident determination on a part of a large majority of the house Republicans that in no circumstances must the Vreeland bill be changed in the slightest respect. When the conferees met, therefore, they found there was nothing to do. The senate conferees stood pat on the Aldrich bill, while the representatives of the house confessed that it was futile to longer continue the sessions.

Since the word has gone out to the country that congress is about to adjourn without passing an emergency currency bill, members of the house have been deluged with protests. They have been warned that while the signs do not point to another panic it would be well to make provision for an emergency. Taking the cue from a remark made in the course of a speech by Representative Burton, of Ohio, business men and bankers in the west insist that if there is a bumper crop this year the demand for currency will be as urgent as it gaudy panic were stalking abroad in the land. For these reasons certain house Republicans who are influential in legislative affairs are insistent that the day of adjournment may be well postponed in order that every opportunity may be afforded for the passage of a currency bill. Among these are Speaker Cannon.

The good offices of the administration may yet be used to induce congress to put through a currency measure. Significance in this connection is attached to the action of President Roosevelt in referring the omnibus public building bill to the secretary of the treasury for review. This measure carries appropriations aggregating $32,000,000. While this is a large sum of money to draw from a treasury that is now $59,000,000 behind, it should be borne in mind that the outlay authorized will not be expended immediately. It will be expended over a period of several years. There is reason to believe that the public building bill will be used as an example to which the administration will point in making known its wishes that something be done to put the treasury in a state of preparedness in the event of a financial emergency in the fall.

Just at this time the treasury is in no shape to go to the relief of the commercial world in the event of industrial depression or financial panic. The deficit now approximates $59,000,000. The future is not promising.

Revenues are falling off and gold is leaving the country rapidly. The hundred or so millions deposited in national banks at the time of the panic and later withdrawn cannot be deposited again as things now stand. In the event of a big crop or of any disturbance affecting business the treasury, it is believed, would be absolutely powerless to afford relief.

Nearly all Republicans agree upon the necessity for emergency currency. It is a question of details. The most earnest will be made during the next 48 hours to bring about an agreement that will result in the enactment of an emergency currency law.

REPUBLICAN

Party Managers Get Busy Preparing Details for the Coming Convention.

Washington, May 25.—As the time for holding the Republican national convention draws near, the active party managers at the White House and the capitol are arranging the personnel of the convention leadership. All hands, Taft and the so-called allies, are agreed on Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, of Massachusetts, for permanent chairman. There is not likely to be any contest against the election of Senator Julius Caesar Burrows, of Michigan, for temporary chairman in spite of the fact that his selection for that office by the national committee's sub-committee of arrangements was very distasteful to President Roosevelt.

The liveliest contest now going on concerns the chairmanship of the committee on resolutions which drafts the campaign platform. A movement in behalf of Senator Albert J. Hopkins, of Illinois, got well under way after it was known that Representative Theodore K. Burton, of Ohio, regarded as the administration's choice for the place, was to make the speech placing Mr. Taft in nomination. This movement it has become evident is not pleasing to the administration, which is throwing its support to Senator William Warner, of Missouri. The administration is anxious to make Senator Warner prominent in the convention for several reasons, chief among them that he is the first Republican senator from Missouri since reconstruction days, that it is desirable to recognize that Missouri's adherence to the Republican party in 1904 broke the solid south, and that Senator Warner deserves reward for his persistent support of President Roosevelt on the floor of the senate.

There is much earnest talk about the vice presidential nomination. Governor Guild, of Massachusetts, and Governor Fort, of New Jersey, are regarded as out for it. Vice President Fairbanks has strong backing and is believed to be in the lead. There are clear indications, however, that the Taft management looks with a kindly eye upon George B. Cortelyou.

A GANG OF BIKE THIEVES AT WORK

That there is an organized gang of bicycle thieves working in this city there is no longer any doubt in the minds of the police department officials. Three wheels were reported stolen Monday. C. A. Fisher reported one stolen from in front of the City National bank building; Manager Norris reports that one was taken from in front of the Central Union Telephone building, and M. J. Jaenoro, of 800 Sherrick avenue, says that one was stolen from him. All are said to be good wheels.

CRIMINAL

Work of Present Court Term Started Yesterday Before Judge Ambler

BRADWAY CASE IS UP

The criminal work of this term of court opened Monday afternoon in Judge Ambler's section of common pleas court with the calling of the case of John Broadway, indicted by the last grand jury for attempted criminal assault. The prosecuting witness is Elsie Weaver. Both parties are from Alliance and both are young. The offense is alleged to have been committed March 3.

The hearing of the case progressed rapidly after the jury was impaneled and when court adjourned last night the defendant was on the witness stand and his attorney, William M. Roach, was about to turn him over to Prosecutor Upham for cross examination. The prosecution concluded the case for the state early in the afternoon calling but few witnesses. Among these were the prosecuting witnesses and Chief Howell, of Alliance, who is claimed to have obtained a confession from the defendant. Broadway, however, on direct examination yesterday claims that he did not appreciate just what he was pleading to when he had his preliminary hearing in the mayor's court in Alliance. During the course of the afternoon considerable testimony was introduced which questioned the character of the prosecuting witness.

A pathetic figure in the court room was the mother of the defendant. She looked a frail, toll-worn woman and many times during the afternoon she would look at the boy sitting close to her, whose liberty was in jeopardy, and then surreptitiously dry the tears that started from over-full eyes. After the court had been adjourned and the defendant had been taken in charge by a deputy sheriff for the night the overwrought mother broke completely down and it was some little time before she regained her composure and was able to leave the courtroom.

The case is likely to be argued and given to the jury by noon today at least. The jury before whom the case is being tried is as follows: F. E. Kohler, Willis Putman, David Sommers, Charles Gilbert, Reuben Dourm, Jacob Hovenstein, Herman Loeffer, Joseph Rhodes, John Clapsaddle, Daniel Braucher.

The case of Ohio against Hahn and Wilkins is next on the assignment and will likely be called when the present trial is concluded.

EVELYN'S SUIT COMES UP TODAY

New York, May 25.—The suit brought by Evelyn Thaw for the annulment of her marriage to Harry Thaw comes up for hearing before Referee Robert E. Deyo tomorrow. The suit has been adjourned from time to time since it came up for hearing on May 11 and last week Daniel O'Reilly, counsel for Evelyn Thaw, said that the suit might be dropped. Mr. O'Reilly was asked today what decision had been reached with regard to the hearing.

"No decision has yet been arrived at," said Mr. O'Reilly. "A conference will be held tomorrow morning before the hearing which is set for the afternoon. It will then be decided whether or not we will drop the suit. Now that it has been decided that Harry must remain in Matteawan, Mrs. Thaw may try all the harder to secure an annulment, but nothing will be determined today."

Col. Franklin Bartlett, counsel for Mrs. William Thaw, said that he will not agree to any further postponement in the matter.

"Unless the case goes on tomorrow," he added, "I will move for its dismissal on the ground of failure to proceed."

FORMER AKRON MAN

Associated With O. C. Barber and Widely Known, Dead in New York.

Akron, O., May 25.—John Kelley Robinson, former Akron millionaire and, next to Ohio C. Barber, perhaps better known to the financial world than any other Akron man, died in New York Saturday evening, either from a fall from his horse or from an affection of the heart.

Mr. Robinson has suffered with a weak heart for a long time. Saturday afternoon he went for a drive through the park, suddenly he reeled and fell from the saddle. He died less than an hour later. Physicians believe the fall was due to an attack from his heart which rendered him powerless to stay in the saddle.

Cheerful News For Youngstown People

In this great world there is hardly a home, however humble in which a newspaper is not read. And what is the general character of news read? It is usually news of misfortune and misery; of war, accidents, deaths, sickness, etc. There is, however, today a person in Youngstown, O., who sees and hears about pain, sickness and misery day after day and yet furnishes to the newspaper readers more articles of cheer, brightness and hope than any other living soul.

The person referred to is the Quaker Health Teacher, who is making his headquarters in that city at the present time.

Where can more real happiness be found than in a home where sickness and pain were banished and good health substituted? Where father or mother, who were suffering for years with Rheumatism, Catarrh, Indigestion, Liver, Kidney, or Stomach Troubles have been cured; where puny, weak children suffered with stomach disorders or probably worms, were suddenly made strong, healthy, bright and happy. Many, yes, very many of such homes of sickness and misery were transformed into homes of brightness and cheer because the wonderful Quaker Remedies were cured. The great Quaker Herb Extract is composed entirely of herbs, roots, berries, leaves and blossoms. It is guaranteed to cure Rheumatism, Catarrh, Indigestion, Constipation, Nervousness, Kidney, Liver, Stomach or Blood Troubles. If you suffer try these remedies and let them prove to you what they can do. Read what Mrs. Lester, 957 E. Federal St., has to say: "I was complaining for years, still I could not say exactly what ailed me. I was very nervous. Woke up nearly every morning with a nervous headache. Always felt tired and seemed to have lost all vim and energy. I was subject to dizzy spells, shortness of breath, heart fluttering and my hands and feet were always cold; also suffered from constipation and was obliged to take physics to force my bowels to move. I was indeed a miserable woman. I bought three bottles of Quaker Herb Extract and began taking it at once. Results were wonderful, as my improvement since has been phenomenal. I have not had an attack of headaches since. I now wake up in the morning feeling strong after a good night's sleep. Those dizzy sensations have left me and I now feel like a new woman."

This case proves what Quaker Herb Extract can and does do, so if you are suffering with any of the cases named above, do not delay but obtain them at Roth & Hug, 333 E. Tuscarawas St., F. LePage, Canal Dover, O.; F. C. Rea, New Philadelphia, O.; Garver Bros. Co., Strasburg, O.

ESCAPING CONVICT FATALLY INJURED

Columbus, May 25.—With his skull fractured, his jaw broken, a compound fracture of his right thigh, a simple fracture of the left leg and all his ribs caved in on one side of the body, Thomas Ryan lies dying in the Columbus workhouse. He fell 30 feet from the roof of the building while making a desperate effort to escape from the institution Sunday night.

GOVERNOR HAS SIGNED BILLS NEVER PASSED

Columbus, May 25.—Through a blunder on the part of a clerk two senate bills, which passed that body but failed to get through the house, were signed up as laws by President James Williams of the senate and Speaker Freeman T. Bagleson of the house, and were certified as such to Governor Harris and signed by him.

These were the Rathbun bill, which provided that when a fair, impartial trial can not be had in a county that jurors for the case may be drawn from an adjoining county, and the Sites bill, imposing severe punishment for violation of the police regulations for the state lands, lakes and reservoirs dedicated for public parks and pleasure resorts. That these bills were not laws was not discovered until they had left the governor's office and had been certified to the secretary of state.

Both bills passed the senate and were defeated in the house. They were then messaged back to the senate with the information that the house had refused to pass them. Through the carelessness of the senate engrossing clerk the bills got mixed up with some that had passed both houses and were engrossed as laws along with the others.

There was little excuse for the mistake, as on the fact of each bill is a notation explaining whether it passed or was defeated. The bill were subsequently presented to the presiding officers for the signatures and later to the governor for him. The blunder, while awkward, is not of serious consequence, as it does not affect any legislation that was actually enacted.

It is not near as mischievous as the one on the part of the house clerk which cost the city of Columbus the comfort station for which its board of trade and other public-spirited citizens had been working for years. Their chagrin over this was very deep.

ALLEGED HORSE THIEF

Now in Custody at Coraopolis, Pa. Will Be Brought Back to Canton.

Henry Paulus, clerk of Mayor Turnbull's court, went to Columbus Monday afternoon. He will call upon Governor Harris Tuesday morning in order to get requisition papers for John Vaughn, who is being held at Coraopolis, Pa., on a charge of stealing a horse from this city three weeks ago. When he returns with the necessary papers Chief Smith will either go himself or send some person to Harrisburg, Pa., with the papers and will then return from Coraopolis with the man wanted.
